

The extension of MFN to other Eastern European nations has already occurred, and it is time for us to extend MFN to Romania as well. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, following 3 years generations of Communist regime, Romania for the last 5 years has struggled to implement a deliberate program of converting to a free market system. Its new democratic government realizes that critical to reaching that goal is the privatization of its industry through passage of new laws, broadened investment policies, and proliferation of international economic partnerships. U.S. businesses can and should be significant in this economic transformation now in progress.

The result of Romania privatization is the systematic updating and upgrading of all its productive means, from the farm yards to the steel mills; and each industrial change presents opportunity for American engineering, technology, and management to become ingrained in that new system. Most-favored-nation status for Romania flashes to American business that final unmistakable signal of governmental encouragement for participation in and development of this burgeoning new market for United States products.

Additionally, Romania realizes that its new found industrial emphasis will require significant infrastructural modernization and a number of new facilities. These projects will demand large infusions of outside professional and technical services, materials, equipment, and technology, as well as realistic financing innovations. Until now, American efforts in these areas have been overshadowed by European and Asian companies; however, that is beginning to change. Most-favored-nation status is the final step in demonstrating deep American interest in Romania.

Today, a consortium of United States firms named Motorways U.S.A., which includes several Texas enterprises, is in direct negotiations with the Government of Romania for design, construction, operation and maintenance of its first toll road facility. Romania has enthusiastically welcomed this initially attempt by United States companies to provide by partnership dramatically different approaches for solving its most pressing needs.

This willingness to venture out and to rely on what, by Romanian standards, are novel and innovative free market techniques as impetus for its new market economy, exemplifies that certain willingness and dedication which will make Romania a long-term trading partner with the United States. This has been key in convincing me that now is the time to give Romania permanent most-favored-nation status and urge you to join me in doing so. A vote for this resolution is a vote for American jobs, favorable balance of trade, and increased American economic presence in Central and Eastern Europe.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to H.R. 3161 which would confer permanent most favored-nation [MFN] status on the country of Romania. A vote on this critical piece of legislation now would seriously hamper any efforts by the prodemocratic forces in Romania to continue to reform the Government and improve Romania's human rights record.

Among all of the former Communist bloc countries in Eastern Europe, Romania has made the fewest advances toward greater liberty and openness since the transition period began. The Hungarian minority, for example, suffers immensely from limited freedoms and constant discrimination. Today, a new education law has been implemented which prohibits the teaching of most subjects in minority languages. In addition, an ethnic Hungarian citizen, Paul Cseresznyes, has been in prison for 6 consecutive years on political grounds with no hope of release in the near future.

The preservation of basic human rights, which we take for granted here in the United States, has not received due respect in Romania. Freedom of speech is constrained as journalists work under the ever-present shadow of harassment by the Romanian intelligence service. And, during the recent local elections, objective observers expressed some concern about the administrative competence of election officials.

Much of the blame for this delay can be laid at the feet of the regime currently in power. In voting for permanent MFN status today, we, as a leader of the Western World, are also ratifying the Romanian Government's actions to date. We cannot allow ourselves to be oblivious to the broader message that approval of H.R. 3161 sends. A decision is best made only after Romania's presidential and parliamentary elections in December, when it reaffirms its commitment to democratic reform. Romania should be given credit for beginning the transformation to an open society in the wake of its Communist past, but permanent MFN status from this country is not the best means of doing so.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CRANE] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3161.

The question was taken.

Mr. FUNDERBURK. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5, rule I, and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

Mr. FUNDERBURK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 3161.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.
